District 9 sent a huge contingent of players to the Youth NABC – 32 in all. Most of them are in the photo.

District 9 steps up to the plate

The 2013 Youth NABC in Atlanta has attracted players from all over North America. Thanks to Atlanta Junior Bridge, there is a huge contingent here from the metropolitan area to lead the way in numbers of players.

An easy second would have to be District 9 – Florida.

More than 30 players from the district showed up in Atlanta to see their friends and vie for matchpoints and IMPs.

Nancy Hagerty, the district's youth education representative, notes that any player who filled out the proper paperwork and plays four of the six sessions at the Youth NABC is entitled to a $500 scholarship.

Hagerty says the money for the scholarships comes from a foundation established by the district. There are many generous sponsors, she says: "We have received gifts from various sources."

Most of the young players, Hagerty adds, are from Bear Lake Elementary School in Apopka, near Orlando. She says most of the young recruits to bridge can be credited to Jill Lundberg, who teaches gifted students at Bear Lake.

Hunt, Ladyzhensky win Baron Barclay Youth Pairs

Winners of the Baron Barclay Youth Pairs: Allison Hunt and Asya Ladyzhensky

Ben Kristensen and Kevin Rosenberg were second in the Baron Barclay Youth Pairs.

For first time in the history of the Youth NABC, the Baron Barclay Youth Pairs has been won by a pair of young women. Allison Hunt and Asya Ladyzhensky had big games in both session to win by 7.02 matchpoints on a top of 11.

Second place went to Ben Kristensen, Duluth MN, and Kevin Rosenberg, Cupertino CA.

Hunt is from Charlotte NC, Ladyzhensky from Ellenton FL. In the qualifying session, they racked up 68.86%. They followed with 66.10% in the final to hold off their challengers.

Hunt and Ladyzhensky have been regulars at the Youth NABC from its inception in 2005. Ladyzhensky, daughter of two accomplished players from Russia – Irina and Alexander Ladyzhensky – has not missed one.

China again represented at the Youth NABC

Last year in Philadelphia, more than 30 players from China showed up to compete in the 5th Youth NABC. Despite the added attraction of the World Youth Open Bridge Championships, which starts on Sunday at the Hyatt, the Chinese contingent is smaller. Smaller, however, does not mean less enthusiastic.

Five of the players come from Dalian, a seaport city of about 6 million people. The players attend the Dalian Gelin Primary School, where bridge has been taught for three years in a government-supported program.

The school principle, Chen Hongwei, accompanied the young players to Atlanta. With her daughter, Liu Xiaohe, interpreting, Chen says she heartily endorses bridge and all its benefits for the young players.

"Bridge is the best mind game in the world," she says. "It helps the students learn to communicate and, most important, to be responsible for themselves."

District 9

Says Hagerty, "She has generated a lot of new players."

On Friday, the District 9 players were sporting yellow shirts with the FJB (Florida Junior Bridge) logo on the front. They have shirts in other colors.

The Florida players have done well, with Asya Ladyzhensky of Ellenton earning first in the Baron Barclay Youth Pairs

Nancy Hagerty.

Hagerty and her husband, Paul, live in Oviedo, also nearly Orlando. She is a retired guidance counselor. Paul was Seminole County school superintendent for 12 years.

She has coordinated all the Youth NABC activity for the district and finds the job very rewarding. "It's so much fun," she says, "and the parents have been wonderful."

Chen said the school has about 80 students taking bridge lessons, taught by a coach hired from the local bridge club. "The students need to learn more," she

As for the decision to make the long trip from China to Atlanta, Chen says, "There is an old Chinese saying: 'It is more important to travel than to read a lot."

Greeting Chen and two of her associates was Jack Chang, who is in Atlanta with his daughter, Sophia, a competitor in the Youth NABC. Change lives in Los Angeles and work in information technology at the City of Hope Cancer Center.

A bridge player for 40 years, the native of Taiwan arrived in the U.S. 26 years ago. When his daughter and son, Nolan, were old enough, he started teaching them card games, eventually moving to bridge and bridge clubs. Nolan, Chang says, has done well in regional tournaments in Southern California.

Chang says he endorses bridge because it teaches young players logic and social skills and provides the opportunity to make new friends. "It's a game you can play for a lifetime," he says. "Even if you leave the game for a while, you can go back any time."

Sophia, playing with Lucy Zhang, says bridge is fun for her because "I like the thinking."

Hailey Botkins and Bernadette Williams are on a roll. In two days of play in the Card Rook Pairs at the Youth NABC, the 12-year-olds have won three times, twice in Strat A and once in Strat B. They are planning to play in the World Youth Open Bridge Championships, which start on Sunday.

Hailey and Bernadette - Bernie to friends - are part of a group of six young players from Williamsburg VA put together by Jim Davis, their teacher, mentor and one of the city's most active promoters of bridge.

Davis has been teaching and promoting bridge to young players since the fall of 2011, when his wife passed away. Shortly thereafter, he read an article about a man who was teaching bridge to elementary school students. He approached the teacher and asked if he could help, "and I liked it so much I wanted to do it on my own."

Davis is now teaching bridge at two schools. At the 2012 Spring NABC in Memphis, Davis took the Teacher Accreditation Program (TAP). At a sectional in Williamsburg this spring, he talked the organizers into letting him run a youth sectional.

He's is excited about the Youth NABC and the World Bridge Federation tournament that follows this weekend.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Davis says.

He notes that he is not surprised that Hailey and Bernadette have done so well at the tournament: "They have progressed so much faster." At home in Williamsburg, the girls go to "lots of tournaments." Says Hailey: "Bridge makes me smarter." Bernadette says her father told her he would buy her an iPhone5 if she came in first, second or third in an event. She's hoping the multiple first-place finishes will help her get a phone for her partner.

He says Chris Compton was helpful in arranging funding for the trip from Williamsburg to Atlanta, but the kids did some fundraising on their own, selling flower bulbs. Unit 110 in Williamsburg also pledged support.

Jim Davis, a bridge teacher from Williamsburg VA, brought these players to compete in the Youth NABC. Front, Hailey Botkin and Emma Millikin, Bernadette Williams; rear, Helber Oliveira, Kristian Stephani and Matt La Rosée.

Davis retired from his job as contract administrator for the U.S. Department of Defense. Ever since, he says, "it's been bridge, bridge, bridge."

Another enthusiastic group of players arrived in Atlanta from north central Texas, accompanied by their grandmother, Dorothy Moore, who lives in Keller TX, about 30 miles from Dallas, and teaches bridge in the Dallas suburb of Arlington.

Moore's foursome is made up of Laura Dunlan, 10, and Thomas Dunlap, 7, of Keller. Matt Pope, 9, and Katie Pope, 10, also came along. They live in Justin, about 40 miles from Dallas.

The three oldest, Moore says, attended a bridge camp last year put on by Donna Compton, and they went back for more this summer. Moore lets the children play in the 0-300 game she runs when they get a chance.

Bridge, Moore says, "is extra helpful for thinking, and the kids have learned a lot about cooperation.'

Laura says bridge is fun for her because "it gets you thinking - and I get to spend more time with my brother." He agrees: "It gets your brain started."

Katherine and Krystal Wu won the Friday went to Eric Rodriguez and Piper Ziebarth.

Wilbert Liu and Sireesh Ramesh came in first in the Youth Consolation Pairs, Strat C.

These Texas players are attending their first Youth NABC: Laura Dunlap, Thomas Dunlap, Katie Pope and Matt Pope. With them is Dorothy Moore.
